Already plans are being made to esablish a line of Japanese steamers diect to England, and the great English steamship companies are to be crippled arst and then destroyed.

It is necessary to understand this before it is possible to realize the present attitude of Japan towards China and towards the rest of the world. But there is a cloud on the horizon, a very small cloud but still a cloud, and it is this-that is, forcing Japan to carry the war on relentlessly, to attempt to break down China at any cost without regard to the possible effect of such an event upon the interests of other nations.

But since the fall of Port Arthur the war party of Japan, which is theanti-foreign party, has had supreme control of public affairs and public policy. All other branches of the Government have shrivelled into insignificance and the soldiery are movers of the future. Of the future? Well, of the present. The finances of Japan begin to figure largely in the plans of the Government. The first loan of 30,000,000 yen ($30,000,000) five per cent. bonds was floated as a domestic enterprise at par. THE MONEY QUESTION. If the Government collects all its loans from the people—and if the war continues it must do so-something like 40,000,000 yen will be left in circulation as a medium of commerce - in other words, a little over $1 a head for the entire population of the Empire.

Of course much of the money called in by the Government will be immediately put into domestic circulation, but this is only true of paper money. The gold and silver will be paid out to for-eign countries where the paper yen is unacceptable.

At the present time large quantities of silver and gold, many millions in fact, are being shipped out of Japan to meet war expenses, and as gold and silver disappear the currency of Japan will be upon a parity credit basis with othing but paper.

That is why I say there is a cloud on the horizon, while England and Russia remain in the shadow keeping watch over their own.

A SUNFLOWER CLOCK.

A curious French timeplece is in the orm of a sunflower in silver, which recrudes from a white crystal vase traceful in shape and soberly decoated The stalk is of brown silk and leave

The stalk is of brown silk and leaves green, the petals yellow and the heart of the flower deeply oxidized. Hour and minute marks are engraved around the heart of the flower, which faces the looker-on.

A lady bird of spotted-red enamelled gold apparently rests on the flower, on the line dividing the heart from the petals. This pretty insect, which moves imperceptibly by means of a mechanism hidden within the flower, shows the time.

ers, sugar-coated, easier to defend and concentrated vegetable extracts act upon the liver in a natural way that lasts. They have a peculiar strengthening effect on the intestines. They not only relieve, but permanently cure.
